WHAT POTASH WILL DO.

Concentrated potash dissolved in a little water will cleanse the grimlest and greasiest of nickel plate on a cook stove as if by magic. After dissolving the potash in a little water rub it over the plating with a small mop. An old mop is good for the purpose. If by accident a little of the potash should get on the hands or fingers dip them into a little vinegar. It will be well, however, to take the greatest care that it does not get on the hands.

Kitchen sinks, drains and garbage buckets may be thoroughly cleaned in this way, Grease stains that have been ground into an old kitchen flooring will come out with petash when nothing else would have any effect on them. Use a hot solution, and if one application is not enough, use a second or even a third. If the wood is very white the solution will sometimes leave a yellowish stain. To avoid this, mix the solution with a little lime until a thick parter is formed: then cover the spot with the paste and let it remain on the floor for twelve hours. For flooring of better quality a weak solution of fuller's earth and soda is sometimes used.

To remove dust marks from wall paper sprinkle powdered French chalk over a piece of stale bread and rub it on the paper. If this is not a success apply cornmeal with a cloth.
